Mr. Francis then stated it as his opinion that the Board has no jurisdiction over the shipping of the harbour. The matter was conthat such power was vested in the Health Officer. I thought it would be interesting to the members of the Board to know what view this Board took in July, 1890, and which shows, I think that there was no intention in this case to treat the Board with discourtesy when it ought to be consulted. Dr. Avers-I should like to know how on these urgent occasions the Board is to be consulted. There are matters of importance and immediate urgency and are attented with very large expense. IT RECALLS THE BLIZZARD.

lat. 27.09 N., long. 121.16 E.

In March, 1888, the great blizzard in America almost extinguished the city of New York. The like of it was never before seen. The snow complately stopped all local traffic. Not a horse or a wheel could move. All the telegraph lines leading into the city were prostrated, and for two or three days the people of Buston and New York communicated with each other by way of London by means of the Atlantic cables. Thus messages intended for persons three hundred miles distant were sent six thousand miles crossing the ocean twice. An incident which recalls this experience to the writer's mind happened a short time ago here in England. Suppose we let the gentleman interested tell his own story. He says: "J have suffered more or less from indigesti in and dyspensia all my life. I had a bad taste in the mouth, pain after eating, a poor appetite, and sour stomach. My tongue was coated, and my month constantly filled with a watery fluid. No matter what I ato, however light, it disagrood with me and gave me pain. I had fulness of the obest, and pain at my side, with a miserable low, dull feeling. From time to time I consulted a doctor who gave me medicines, but they did very Thorm. I was completely cured, and have been in good health, as regards the indigestion. ever since. Having studied the practice of herbs for many years. I was in the habit of treating people for erysipelas and other complaints, and was frequently consulted, by people in the district, so after my remarkable oure, f was to impressed with the merits of Seigel's Syrup, that I procured a large supply of the medicine, and recommended it to all who were suffering, and people came from far and near for it. I may mention that on a Sunday my house was beseiged by miners from Coal Pit Heath, and others from a distance. On every hand I heard nothing but the londe t praise and of the cures it effected, and the fame of this medicine was spread throughout the West of England with no other advertising than one party telling another of the benefit they had derived from this wonderful medicine, I wish every one to know of this and if by publishing this statement it will help others who may be suffering as I was, it will afford me pleasure."

The letter from which the foregoing is an extract is signed Moses Godwin. Old Sodbury (Sodbury), Glos., and is dated April 9th, 1891. He is a farmer.

Mr. Benjamin Edgerton, grocer and provision dealer, Plat Lane, Whitall, Whitohureb, Salop, says, "While living with Mr. Roberts, Fens Wood Farm, I first began to feel a dull heavy weight at my side, and noticed a bad taste in the month with foul stomach and uncomfortable feeling after eating. I had no appetite, and when I sat down to the table I could not touch the food. I had a good deal of pain and noise in the need, and could not sleep for it. I was not fit for heavy work, and could only do light jobs about the farm. After cutting a hedge I would go quite faint, and had to sit down and felt so much depressed I could have oried. Having al ways been such a strong man I took it badly to be reduced to such a weak state. I took all kinds of physic and sow a doctor, but his medicine only cased me for a bit, and then I was worse than before. I went on in this way for over a year, when a servant that came to live at Mr. Roberts told me of a medicine called Mother Saigal's Syrup. She had heard a gentleman talking about it in the railway carriage, and he praised it so much that I thought I would try it. After I had taken two battles my food did me good, and I gained strength, and by persevering with the syrup I soon got as atrong as ever, and have never alled anythin grince."

"Repentance," said Paul the Deacon, "opens all doors. I shall make baste to repent." He sat down: therefore, and wrote two letters. one of them he addressed to his late Vicar. It was the second letter-you have heard of first. He deplored deeply any errors—he can-didly called them errors—which he might have committed; he hinted that as regards money he could not understand that any harm had been done. "I merely borrowed of you, as from our common chest, certain money wanted parish purposes. I forget to tell you of What crime have I committed f As regards excuse. But I plead none-I am deeply penitent. I can say no more. Meantime, I have been disgraced by being turned away from the Bishop at the last moment, in the face of the whole congregation. Is not that enough? I now ask you, first, to write to the Bishop withdrawing the charge of fraud, and softening as much as you can-if not withdrawing altogether. which would be the more charitable line-the other business. This done, he will doubtle s receive me at his next ordination. Secondly, I wish to return my character unstained to my post among our beloved flook. Any little coldness or suspicion will soon pass away. As I said scandal. I shall not be one. Take care not to

He added a few tags which he thought might be useful. In the letter which he wrote to the Bishop he complained that a charge of forgery and fraud had been made out of a perfectly innecent and well-meant act. That, in short, in the absence of the Vicar, he had signed his name in order to got some money necessary for parish purposes. not for himself at all. As regards the other matter be abased himself. The Vicar when he got this epistle tossed it across the table to his wife. "An impudent eo." And he did.

The Bishop read the letter with a brow of "This letter reveals a very unusual mind," he said to his Chaplain. "One might wish to have the writer here as in a hospital-we want a hospital of Crooked and Crippled Minds and to watch the development of him. Who was it said shat the study of mankind is a mathematical broblem, not that every man is an enigma? Here is a creature who commits a common and. clumsy forgery; there is not the least reason for believing that he feels the smallest shame or ro pentance for it: he shows that he has no sur feeling. He steals and is detected. He doesn't feel any shame; he thinks the matter will be just pass-

As for the second part of it. the alleged penitency is the most palpable sham. There is no true ring about it. Tell him that he must continue to repent in order to mave his confalive—and not in order to get priest's orders. Tell him also that under no circumstances will I allow him to officiate again in my diocese as a Demon nor will I bestow upon him the order of the triesthood." This instruction the Chaplain faithfully—even realmsly—corried out, so that the young man was for ashort time heavy in spirit, because he knew not low, outside the t hurch, he was to live. When he had finished these letters it was close upon seven o'clook. At this time the mind of man naturally turns in the direction of dinner. This led him to think of his resources, because duner cannot be obtained without money. People looked for his stories; and the cheques came in-not of course enormous cheques, bu modest cheques, as big as could be expected. He went no more to the all night club, and he lived in cheap lodgings. He had found an excellent way of making money, and being, as before stated, young and buoyant, he did not ask himself low long the game would last. It las ed for eight months : during this tim he had planted twelve stories; he had six of seven more nearly ready when the crash came. It came in the form of a letter to the Athenœum in which the writer pointed out that three stories, all bearing the signature of Paul Iliffo. were all three purioined-he said purloinedfrom the pages of an old American megazine the other incident, youth might be pleaded an icalled The Knickerbocker. Paul saw a reference to the letter in the bill of a morning paper. When he got the Athenœum and read the letter he hastened to change his lodgings and his name. As none of his editors ad ever seen him he was comparatively sufe. The nufinished stories in his hands he would send, he thought, under another name to other magazines. He was not great y concerned about the soddent. A little paragraph which followed, a few days after, concurred him less because to you the oth r day. it takes two to make a he did not see it. The history of the next year or two is obscure do not think that any complete record of it could be traced. He became the leading tener in a wandering company of nigger minstrels, and used to sing with great feeling, and with upturned eyes, songs of the domestic affect one. The troups was only moderately successful, and the short sometimes refused to walk. It was probably during the tour, and perhans in conseonence of meagre dict, that he began to take cregular nips and drinks. Such a man closs got become a vulgar drankard, he sips while the drunkard laps; but the effect is much the same in loss of will and nerve, and in deterioration. Perhaps there was little further deterioration cossibly. But there was p saibly recovery, and this possibility began to suffer loss. The nigger troupe came to a calamitous end The manager bolted and the company dispersed and had to get back to lown, and other engagements, as best they could. He went on the stage and he might have got on very well Fortunately his first part in a travelling company was that of a gurate. He played it splendidly: never was a curate played with so much sympathy and reality; the upward roll of the eyes never failed to fetch the house; and the ecclesiastical twang, the unctuon drop of the voice, the saintly pose of the hands, seemed to reveal a new actor. They talked of the London stage for him: It was only talk, for the piece came to an end and he was given another part, in
